CONTENTS

PART ONE CONTEXT 13

CHAPTER 1 The Australian state and the global economy 15
JULIAN TEICHER AND RICHARD BRYAN

1.1 Introduction 16
1.2 From state intervention to the rise of neo-liberalism 17
1.3 Economic liberalisation 21
  1.3.1 Opening up the Australian economy 23
  1.3.2 National Competition Policy (NCP) 27
  1.3.3 Labour market deregulation 29
1.4 Neo-liberalism and employee relations 30
1.5 Conclusion 32

CHAPTER 2 Theory in employee relations 36
RICHARD GOUGH, PETER HOLLAND AND JULIAN TEICHER

2.1 Introduction 37
2.2 Work and authority relationships: From status to contract 38
  2.2.1 Status and legitimation 38
  2.2.2 Shift to contract 39
  2.2.3 Breakdown of status legitimation with industrialisation 39
2.3 The employment relationship and theories of industrial society 42
2.4 Traditional perspectives on the employment relationship 42
  2.4.1 The unitary perspective 42
  2.4.2 The pluralist perspective 44
  2.4.3 The systems perspective 45
  2.4.4 The Marxist perspective 46
2.5 Contemporary perspectives on the employment relationship 47
  2.5.1 Feminism 47
  2.5.2 Postmodernism 49
  2.5.3 Fordism and post-Fordism 50
2.6 Conclusion 54

PART TWO

EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP 57

CHAPTER 3

Employee relations, the labour market and work organisation 59

RICHARD GOUGH

3.1 Introduction 60
3.2 Broad patterns of change in the labour market 61
  3.2.1 Changes in female participation in the labour market 62
  3.2.2 Shift in the structure of employment 63
  3.2.3 Changing types of employment in the 1990s 63
3.3 Growth in wage inequality 64
  3.3.1 Causes of increasing inequality 66
  3.3.2 Changing composition of the workforce 67
  3.3.3 Change in wage relativities 69
  3.3.4 More decentralised wage setting and inequality 70
3.4 Working time and casualisation 71
  3.4.1 Longer working hours 71
  3.4.2 Growth in part-time employment 72
3.5 Workplace level change 75
  3.5.1 Restructuring, downsizing and de-layering 75
  3.5.2 Declining internal labour markets and job mobility 77
  3.5.3 Changes to training and work organisation 78
    3.5.3.1 Change to the institutions of job classifications and training 79
    3.5.3.2 Restructuring at the workplace 79
    3.5.3.3 Training at the workplace 81
    3.5.3.4 Lack of mutual gains 82
3.6 Conclusion 83
CHAPTER 4

Human resource management, employee relations 88
CATHY SHEEHAN, PETER HOLLAND AND PETER DOWLING

4.1 Introduction 89
4.2 The evolution of HRM in Australia: Settlement, growth and the employment relationship 89
  4.2.1 A concern with welfare and the growth of unions 90
  4.2.2 The impact of World War I 92
  4.2.3 World War 2 and the personnel function 93
  4.2.4 Personnel in the postwar period 94
  4.2.5 The personnel function in the 1960s and 1970s 95
4.3 HRM as a strategic response 97
4.4 HRM and employee relations 100
  4.4.1 The hard and soft perspectives of HRM 100
  4.4.2 HRM and trade unions 101
  4.4.3 The ‘bleak house’ scenario 102
  4.4.4 Hard HRM and the emergence of the contract culture 103
4.5 Conclusion 103

Case study: Outsourcing in electricity generation 104

CHAPTER 5

Organisational learning and competing interests 110
LAURIE FIELD

5.1 Introduction 111
5.2 The mainstream literature of organisational learning 111
5.3 Dominant assumptions in the mainstream literature 114
  5.3.1 The technical assumption 114
  5.3.2 The unitary assumption 115
5.4 Alternatives to the technical and unitary assumptions 117
  5.4.1 Pluralist perspectives 117
  5.4.2 Labour process perspectives 118
  5.4.3 Postmodern perspectives 118
  5.4.4 Psychoanalytic perspectives and the work group 119
5.5 The political dimension of organisational learning 120
5.6 The emotional dimension of organisational learning 121
5.7 Organisational learning as group learning 122
5.8 Conclusion 123

Case study: The question of empowerment 125
PART THREE
REGULATING THE EMPLOYMENT RELATIONSHIP 205

CHAPTER 9
Management of workplace conflict 207
BERNADINE VAN GRAMBERG

9.1 Introduction 208
9.2 Frames of reference 208
9.3 Causes of workplace conflict 209
  9.3.1 Economic conflict 210
  9.3.2 Technology and conflict 210
  9.3.3 Intra-organisational conflict 211
9.4 Manifestations of conflict 211
9.5 The dispute resolution continuum 211
9.6 Workplace dispute resolution 212
9.7 Grievance procedures 213
  9.7.1 Features of grievance procedures 214
9.8 Alternative dispute resolution systems 214
  9.8.1 Open-door policy 214
  9.8.2 Mediation 216
  9.8.3 Fact-finding 216
  9.8.4 Advisory arbitration 217

8.2.2 New Public Management (NPM) 177
8.2.3 Privatisation 178
8.3 The changing shape of the Australian public sector 179
  8.3.1 New Public Management in Australia 179
  8.3.2 Privatisation in Australia 183
8.4 Employee relations in the Australian public sector 185
  8.4.1 Private sector management techniques 185
  8.4.2 Employment levels in the public sector 187
  8.4.3 Traditional public service employment values: Career service, merit and equity 190
  8.4.4 Employment contracts 191
  8.4.5 Pay, conditions and work organisation 192
  8.4.6 Union exclusion 194
8.5 Conclusion 195

Case study: Telco: Deregulation, privatisation, new technology and employee relations 197
9.8.5 | Mini-trials 217
9.8.6 | Med Arb 217
9.8.7 | Peer review 218
9.8.8 | Internal ombudsman 218
9.8.9 | Voluntary 'voice' systems 218

9.9 Alternative dispute resolution in Australian workplaces 219
9.9.1 | Grievance procedures in the federal industrial relations system 219

9.10 Formal dispute resolution systems: 220

9.10.1 The Australian Industrial Relations Commission 220
  9.10.1.1 The functions of the AIRC 221
  9.10.1.2 The Australian Industrial Registry 221
  9.10.1.3 The Federal Court and High Court 222
  9.10.1.4 The Department of Employment, Workplace Relations and Small Business 222
  9.10.1.5 The Office of the Employment Advocate 223

9.10.2 The structure of the Australian Industrial Relations Commission 223

9.10.3 Industry Panels 223

9.10.4 Full Benches 223

9.11 Resolving conflict in the Australian Industrial Relations Commission 224
  9.11.1 Notification of dispute 224
  9.11.2 Jurisdiction of the Australian Industrial Relations Commission 224
  9.11.3 The use of ambit in the log of claims 226
  9.11.4 The Australian Industrial Relations Commission takes action 227
  9.11.5 Conciliation 227

  9.11.6 Arbitration 228

  9.11.7 The 'public interest' 229

  9.11.8 The resolution 229

9.12 Conclusion 230

Case study: Utilising the grievance procedure at FibreTek 231

CHAPTER 10

Legal regulation of employment 235

Don McKenzie and Bernadine Van Gramberg

10.1 Introduction 236
10.2 Sources of workplace law 236
  10.2.1 Legislation 237
  10.2.2 Awards, agreements and individual contracts 237
  10.2.3 The common law 239
10.3 Employee or independent contractor? 239
10.3.1 Contract of service 240
10.3.2 Contract for services 240
10.3.3 Distinguishing employees from independent contractors 240
  10.3.3.1 The control test 241
10.4 Termination of employment 242
  10.4.1 The operation of the unfair dismissal jurisdiction 243
  10.4.2 Determining whether a termination is 'unfair' 243
  10.4.3 Excluded categories of employees 243
  10.4.4 Tightening the rules 244
  10.4.5 Unlawful termination 244
10.5 Remedies 244
10.6 Enterprise bargaining 245
  10.6.1 The Accord—February 1983 245
  10.6.2 The first National Wage Case under the Accord—September 1983 246
  10.6.3 Managed decentralism 246
  10.6.4 The two-tiered system 247
  10.6.5 The Structural Efficiency Principle (SEP) 248
  10.6.6 Enterprise bargaining 248
10.7 Enterprise bargaining legislation 248
  10.7.1 Certified agreements 249
  10.7.2 Agreement with a trade union 250
  10.7.3 Agreement with employees 250
10.8 Negotiating an agreement 250
10.9 Protected action 251
10.10 Certifying the agreement 251
10.11 No-disadvantage test 252
10.12 Australian Workplace Agreements 252
  10.12.1 Making an AWA 253
  10.12.2 The approval process 253
10.13 Industrial conflict 254
  10.13.1 Protected or not protected? 254
  10.13.2 Responses to industrial action 255
  10.13.3 Orders to stop or prevent unlawful industrial action 255
  10.13.4 Restriction on certain action in tort 255
10.14 Discrimination law 256
  10.14.1 National legislation 256
  10.14.2 Direct and indirect discrimination 257
  10.14.3 Sexual harassment 257
Flexible labour markets, organisations and workers 269

PETER HOLLAND AND MARGARET DEERY

11.1 Introduction 270

11.2 Australian labour markets: From protectionism to micro-economic reform 270
   11.2.1 'New Protection' 270
   11.2.2 Micro-economic reform in Australia 273
      11.2.2.1 The Restructuring and Efficiency Principle 274
      11.2.2.2 The Structural Efficiency Principle:
         Award restructurings 275
      11.2.2.3 Enterprise bargaining 276

11.3 In search of flexibility 277
   11.3.1 Flexible patterns of work 277
   11.3.2 Other forms of flexibility 279
   11.3.3 The flexible firm 279
      11.3.3.1 A critique of the flexible firm model 282

11.4 Assessing the advantages and disadvantages of flexible patterns of work 283
   11.4.1 The employer perspective 283
   11.4.2 The employee perspective of flexible patterns of work 284

11.5 Conclusion 286

Case study: Cost minimisation and the flexible workforce 287
PART FOUR

MANAGING IN A CHANGING ENVIRONMENT

CHAPTER 12

International regulation of employment

INTRODUCTION 294

12.1 Introduction 294

12.1.1 The International Labour Organisation: Structure and means of action 294

12.2 Globalisation, the WTO and the social clause debate 297

12.2.1 The global economy, international labour standards and the free trade/fair trade debate: The theoretical framework 297

12.2.2 The political debate 300

12.2.3 The ILO and the social clause debate 301

12.3 International regulation of employment in Australia 307

12.3.1 International labour standards in Australia 307

12.3.2 Governments, employers, trade unions and the Duffy Report 308

12.3.3 Australia and the Declaration on Fundamental Principles and Rights at Work 309

12.4 Conclusion 311

Case study: If not international governance, is direct action the answer? 312

CHAPTER 13

Equity and diversity

ROBIN KRAMAR

13.1 Introduction 320

13.2 International and national developments 320

13.3 The concept of diversity and diversity management 323

13.3.1 Diversity management 324

13.4 Equal employment opportunity, diversity and the employment relationship 326

13.4.1 From EEO to diversity management 328

13.5 The process of diversity management 329

13.5.1 Strategic 330

13.5.2 Managerial 331

13.5.3 Operational 332
CHAPTER 14

Working in teams 342
RICHARD GOUGH, JULIAN TIECHER AND BOB PARK

14.1 Introduction 343
14.2 A conceptual framework 343
   14.2.1 Offline teams 344
   14.2.2 Parallel teams 344
   14.2.3 Project teams 346
   14.2.4 Management teams 346
   14.2.5 Work teams or online teams 346
14.3 The rise of teamworking 349
   14.3.1 Incidence 349
14.4 Contrasting traditions 350
   14.4.1 Socio-technical ideas of teams 351
   14.4.2 Lean production 354
14.5 Australian ambivalence 357
   14.5.1 Economic context and product markets 357
   14.5.2 Political environment 357
   14.5.3 National industrial relations system 359
   14.5.4 National union attitudes 359
   14.5.5 Employer attitudes and style 361
   14.5.6 Change to the regulation of the employment relationship 362
14.6 Implementing teams 362
   14.6.1 The process 362
   14.6.2 Development of teams 364
   14.6.3 The changing nature of supervision 367
14.7 Conclusion 368

Case study: Empowerment through teams at Chemco: Rhetoric and reality 370

CHAPTER 15

Managing for global competitiveness 382
PETER HOLLAND

15.1 Introduction 383
15.2 The development of TQM and best practice 383
15.3 Developing organisational competitiveness through TQM and HRM 384