Loop trail that wraps around Lake Anza. An excellent spot for birdwatching, fishing, or going for a swim. This is an easy trail that sees a lot of use on the weekends, mostly by families and people walking their dogs. Some parts are a bit technical, but it offers a nice view of the lake and connects with the Selby Trail along with a few others. Weekdays are best here, especially during the summer months. From University Ave. take MLK Drive to Marin. This is an easy trail as far as distance and elevation goes. It is a little rocky though and the trail can be slippery with lots of loose branches, dirty, etc. It can be a little overgrown in the area leading to the bridge and waterfall. The section of the trail after the bridge is washed out. You have to step from rock to rock across the lake to make it. Vladimir Guerrero.

In 1774, the Spanish viceroy of Mexico sent Juan Bautista de Anza, captain of the Presidio at Tubac (in what is now Arizona), to lead two expeditions: the first to find a safe overland route to Monterey, and the second to return Anza to California with 240 men, women, and children to establish a settlement in San Francisco. The Anza Trail and the Settling of California synthesizes firsthand documents and diaries from the Anza expeditions to retell the story of the exploration of the Southwest and the settlement of the San Francisco Bay Area.
